The Natural Ruby is free and clear of all liens and encumbrances. There aren't any Liens, Second Parties Hold, Loans, Storage Debt, Insurance, or Promissory notes attached to the ruby. The owner is the 100% legal owner and is in possession of ruby and proof as legal ownership.

Today there are two general categories of gemstones, including ruby: treated and natural (that is, not enhanced in any way). Rubies have been routinely enhanced by a variety of techniques for almost half a century and are well accepted within the trade. The most common type of treatment for ruby is heating, which improves the color and clarity to varying degrees.

Today anyone buying a ruby should assume it's been heated (and possibly treated in other ways) unless there is documentation from a respected laboratory confirming that it is entirely natural. Natural rubies (that is, rubies that have not been enhanced in any way) are among the rarest of all things—an exceptional 8.60 carat natural ruby sold at auction for $3.6 million dollars, $465,000 per carat!
