Topical Preparations

- Ointments, creams, and lotions are all topical products that you can apply to your skin. Some of them are simply cosmetic products, while others are medications.
- Ointments: Ointments tend to feel greasy. The skin may appear glossy or shiny after using an ointment. They are usually thick and heavy. An ointment usually forms a thick barrier or protective layer on top of your skin. Creams: Compared to ointments, creams are not as heavy & thick. Creams also tend to have a more cosmetically-pleasing appearance.
- Lotions: Lotions are non-greasy products which are thinner than ointments & creams. It covers larger surface areas on the body.
- These differences in appearances and textures are due to the various amounts of oil and water they each contain. Ointments are generally 80% oil - 20% water, and creams are typically 50% oil - 50% water. Lotions contains more water than oil.

Nutraceuticals

Food supplements are foods presented in small unit dose form and containing concentrated sources of nutrients and other food components. The composition, manufacturing, and safety is strictly regulated by FSSAI & ISO at national level.
