A Celebration of Asian Design Excellence

Prices: You will see a url on many items this will give you an illustration of the recommended retail price of the item, our building is a wi fi zone so you can check yourself. Generally our selling price will be 50% or less of the recommended retail price. That cannot be bad !!!! Please ask an assistant for the wi fi connection pass

Our Trident-Tristar project for example will feed, give shelter or school a child for around a year with every vehicle sold... your purchases at D.F.A.L.N will help us to do what we can to feed children, provide clothing and more even bring a little joy from time to time with various toys and other materials from our shipments.

In 2013 we will be registering as a Charitable Trust under the name of "Shelter".

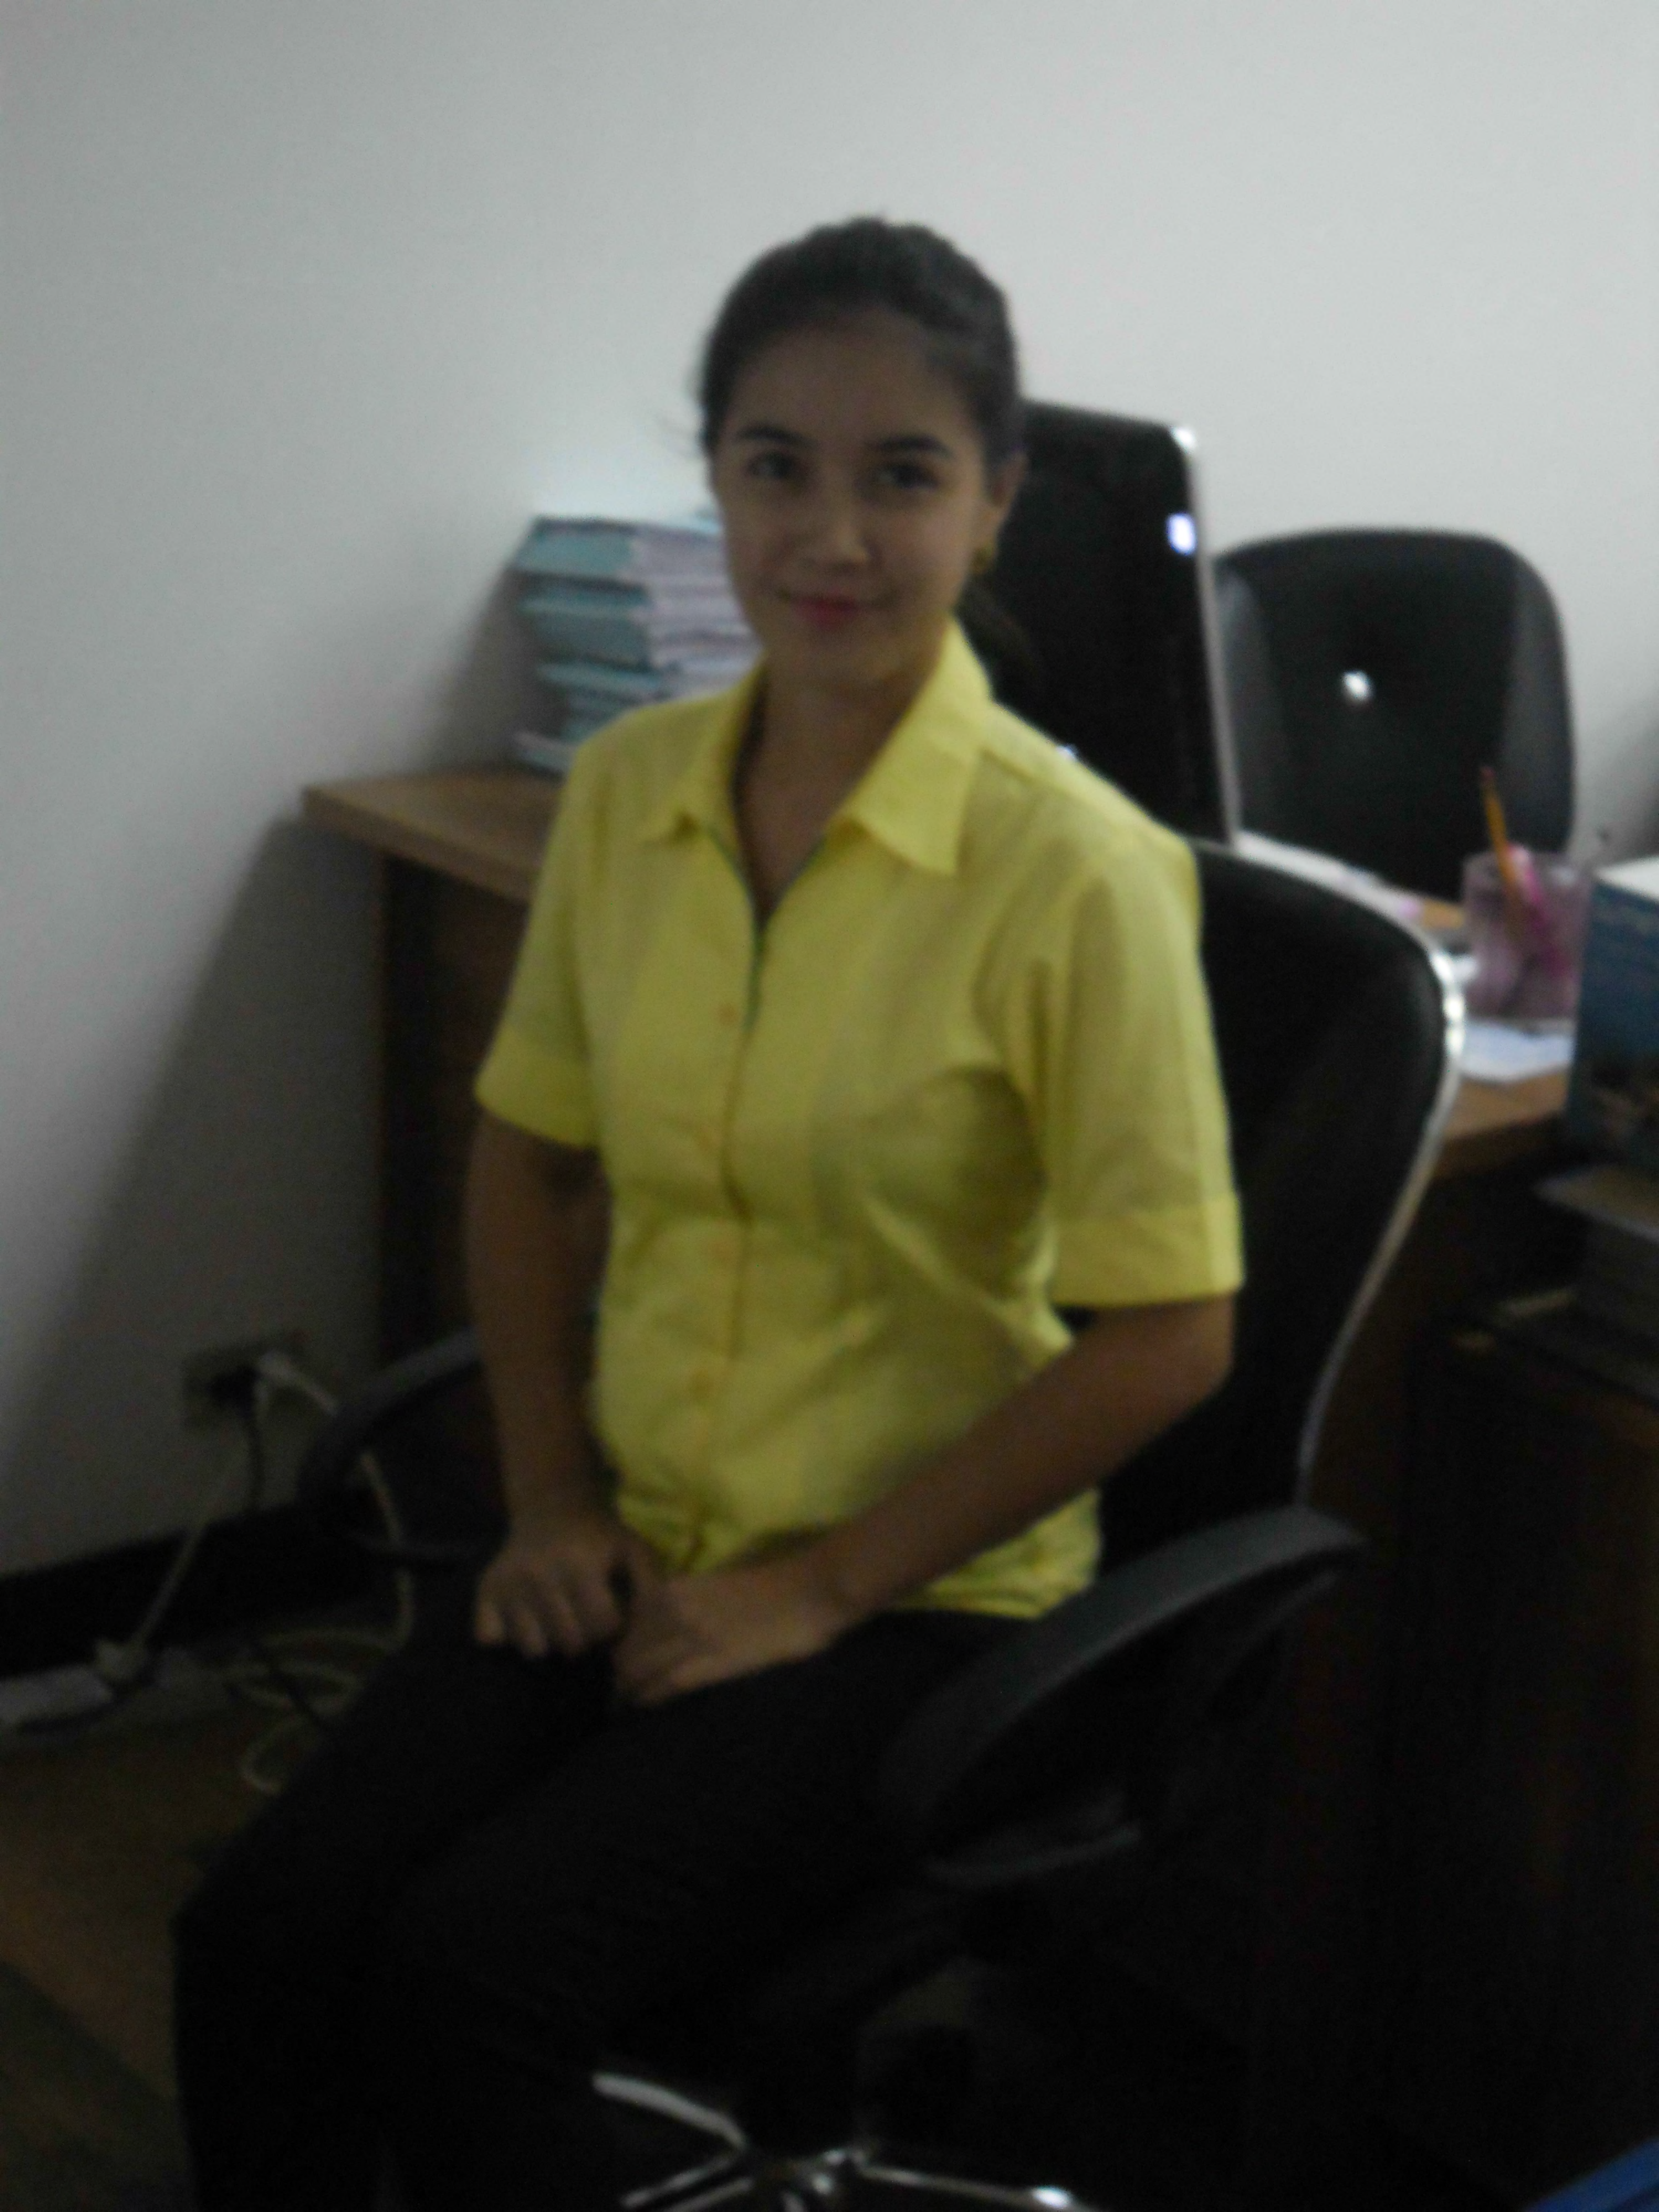

In our perhaps small way we will touch the lives of helpless children, reduce their mother's burden and where possible bring some comfort and a smile to some forgotten old age persons.

Shelter will help with some relief that will reach the under privileged and NOT get diverted elsewhere.

So why are we still talking about plasma TV, and why do a few companies still manufacture them? Simply because the TV is key element technology in your picture. Deep, rich black levels are why, along with the ability to show the finest details in shadows. Some high-end LED sets can approach the black level performance of plasma technology, but not much more than the equivalent plasma TV. Budget plasmas routinely outperform mainstream LED TVs in that regard. The catch, as noted above, is that plasma sets have limited brightness, so you need a room where light levels can be well controlled to get the full impact of those great blacks.

Plasma has other advantages, as well. While viewing angles - how far you can sit off to the side and still see a quality image - of LED and LCD sets are typically narrow, plasma TVs offer very wide viewing angles, making them great for large families or small gatherings. LCD and especially LED sets often suffer from poor uniformity, where different parts of the screen look brighter, which is rarely an issue for plasma. Finally, plasma TVs do a great job of handling fast action, and don't need to resort to an increased refresh rate to do so.

Once you decide that a plasma TV is right for you and how you like to watch TV, it's time to pick the best model based on its performance, features and price. Top-notch expert reviews look at performance both on a test bench and when watching real program material like movies. They also evaluate how well features such as Internet streaming and 3D perform, and if they're worth their additional cost compared to options with lower extras.

User reviews as they say best... though owners typically don't have the benefit of experience pitting one plasma TV against another. The set is question, and how it meets or raises their expectations - both currently and over time. ... of plasma TVs low... controls and at the top of the list comes world games such as FIGHT & BANG ARENA.
